

Transcript

- Wife Hello?
- Courier Oh hello, it's Parcels Direct. I've got a delivery for you.
- Wife What is the name please?
- Courier Mrs Sunita Chowdry.
- Wife Oh yes, that's me. We're on the 1st floor. Could you bring it upstairs please?
- Husband Is that a delivery? Hello. I'll let you in.
- Wife How did you know? You're being very helpful today.
- Husband You look tired. Maybe you should lie down.
- Wife Yeah, good idea. I think I will.
(The courier knocks on the door.)
- Courier Hello, I've got a delivery for you.
- Husband Ah, (loudly) It's the electricity bill.
- Courier Could you sign here please to confirm receipt?
- Husband 'Confirm receipt'?
- Courier To say you've got the parcel.
- Husband It's for my wife. Can I sign it for her?
- Courier Yes, that's fine. You can sign on her behalf. Or a neighbour can, if you're out. Put your signature in the box. There you are.
- Husband Thanks. (quietly) It's a present for my wife actually. It's her birthday.
- Courier Oh really? Today?
- Husband No, next week. But I'm going to hide it!
- Courier Oh, well good luck. I hope she doesn't find it!
- Husband No way, she won't! Cheers.
- Courier Bye. Thank you.
- Wife So, what was it?
- Husband Oh, nothing. Would you like a cup of tea?
- Wife No, come on, what was it?
- Husband Or coffee?
- Wife Come on, tell me, what was it? Give it to me! It's got my name on! It's for me! What are you doing with it?
- Husband It's your birthday next week. You ask too many questions!
- Wife OK, I didn't see anything. I'll make the tea!