Weather forecast

And here is today's weather.

It'll be a cold start with temperatures as low as 3 degrees celsius until about mid morning. There'll also be some heavy rain, especially in the west, so don't forget to take your umbrella with you if you're going out this morning.

By lunchtime things should be looking up and there'll be some sunshine in the early afternoon in most parts, with temperatures reaching 10 degrees celsius by late afternoon. It'll be a warm, dry evening with much higher temperatures than the cold nights we've been having over the last week.

And the good news is the warm weather is going to last for the weekend. Saturday'll be warm and dry with highs of 15 degrees and Sunday should be even hotter with highs of 21 degrees in the afternoon. It looks like summer's finally on its way so get out and make the most of the spring sunshine while you can!
